

Opening Questions

Very general questions that are easy to answer. They set the mood for people to get comfortable and to start talking. E.g: Could you tell us your name and the community you are from?

Introductory Questions

Gets the group to start thinking about the topic at hand. E.g. How did you first learn about the programme?

Transition Questions

The bridge that links the introductory questions and the key questions. They typically ask for more details than the introductory questions.

E.g. Please reflect on when you first participated in the programme. What were your first impressions?

Key Questions

These get to the core of the matter and the majority of the time is devoted to discussing these questions.

E.g. How has your life changed since being involved in the programme?

Ending

Questions

These questions bring the discussions to an end.

E.g. Have we missed anything?

www.annmurraybrown.com

Created by